There was a chorus of assent and Mrs. Holmes read in the faces before her a unanimity of opinion that dismayed her.

"But I'll swear of it," she faltered.

"You've sworn to one story—"

Dimly the woman realized that the promptings of that mother love which had finally assumed shape within her, instead of saving her son had merely served to completely discredit her, and if anything to lessen her chance of assisting him. Again she experienced that wretched feeling of impotence, of frustration. With this feeling the animal in her came to life, blazed into fury.

"You—you fools! You idiots!"

"The Lord struck down Amos Ethridge, for he was an evil-doer and he delighted in his wicked-thess. But Jerry wasn't His instrument. He used Jacob, the son of Hamor.
